-B001M A: This was a bug that has been fixed in JInitiator 1.2.0 which is now released. Bliss is a 50-mile stretch of desert in southern California just east of the La Quinta, California area. It is mostly composed of sand dunes, though the entire area is part of the El Centro, California metropolitan area. The dunes form after a rise in the land forms due to geological pressure and precipitation. The area gets its name from a man named Jeremiah Belcher Bliss, who found gold and oil there in the early 20th century. While it was originally a working mining camp, there was never any significant industry there. The area got its recreational reputation after it became a vacation destination. Bliss is bordered by the Tecate River on the east, Interstate 8 on the south, and U.S. Highway 395 on the north. The city of El Centro lies a couple of miles southeast of Bliss, and the town of Brawley is a few miles east of Bliss. To the west of Bliss, one can travel to the cities of San Diego, La Mesa, and Vista. History

Early history Bliss was once a working mining camp for the nearby Tecate mining area. In the early 1900s, a man named Jeremiah Belcher Bliss found gold and oil there. He named the town Bliss in honor of himself. Bliss had a population of about 100 people in 1900, and doubled that number in the next couple of years. At its peak, Bliss had a population of about 4,000 people. The oil boom ended after World War I, and Bliss experienced a decline in population as a result. The town suffered another blow to its population when Interstate 8 was built. The new highway made it possible to travel from southern California all the way to Mexico. With the new highway came more tourism to Bliss, which resulted in a large expansion of the town. Bliss today has a population of a little over 6,000 people. Bliss today Today, Bliss is a tourist town for the nearby desert. The area has two golf courses and several other attractions. While it doesn't offer a lot of activities, the area does have some recreational areas. A five-mile hiking trail was recently built to the south of the town. There are several restaurants and bars in Bliss. They offer a variety of Mexican food, Mexican beer, and 82157476af
